

Open Index Initiative (OII) an Initiative by IGIDR (Indira Gandhi Institute of Development Research) Library

(A database for Indian Social Science Journals)

About Open Index Initiative (OII)

Open Index Initiative is a modest attempt by the IGIDR library staff [Mumbai, India] to develop an online and searchable bibliographic database for most of the Indian Social Science literature and resources available in Indian libraries. OII indexes selected Indian social science Journals and working papers/discussion papers/occasional Papers, and thesis/dissertations emanating from Indian social science and management institutes and various departments. We welcome all the library professionals of the country, working in social science and management libraries and faculty members from departments of library and information science, to join hands with us, in our endeavour to intensify resource sharing activities.

OII Launched in the year 2007.

We are highly thankful to all the individuals and institutions who have supported us directly or indirectly.

OII Model has been developed on the basis 'Participatory Approach'. Data is expected to come voluntarily from various individuals and institutions. Contributors can key in or update data from their workstations, at their convenience. The stake holders, both the data contributors and the users, may evaluate and offer suggestions to for further improvement.
